

The health and mental support for evacuees must be put first.

We are working closely with volunteers and NPO members from across the nation to provide disaster victims with continuous physical and mental health care. These services will be provided until victims can once again live normal lives.

Number of evacuees*

The number of people who had moved to permanent housing from temporary housing has steadily increased, lowering the number of evacuees from 470,000 to 150,000 in July 2016.

*As of July 31, 2015

Total number of social welfare coordinators assigned to the disaster-affected areas†

Hundreds of certified social workers, including social welfare coordinators, have been assigned to the disaster-affected areas to provide the local residents with welfare services.

Iwate	Miyagi	Fukushima
66	152	159

†As of fiscal year 2015

